

• Name: Norman James Moore

• Current Position: Global Director of Scientific Affairs, Abbott

• Country: USA

• Educational Background:

- Bachelor's Degree in biology and philosophy, Dartmouth College, USA
- PhD in microbiology, University of New Hampshire, USA

• Professional Experience:

He developed the first ever rapid tests for Legionella and S. pneumoniae, both of which are now recommended by the Infectious Disease Society of America.

After being an R&D director for many years, he took the role of Director of Scientific Affairs where he works with the medical community.

• Professional Organizations:

He has served on multiple NIAID grant committees, the CDC guideline group for rapid influenza testing, the College of American Pathology's and Clinical Laboratory Standards point-of care committees, CLSI's infectious disease guideline writing committee, and the American Society for Microbiology's executive committee.

• Main Scientific Publications:

He currently has eight US and 39 non US patents and numerous publications and presentations. He received the Volwiler Fellowship Award for lifetime achievement in science in 2019.